BERLIN, March 14.—Momentary silence greeted the League of Nations council invitation to Germany to participate in discussions of the Rhineland problem today as the Reich uncovered a scheme for fortifying the area with a chain of "pill boxes".

Word of the council's decision in London reached the Wilhelmstrasse just as Chancellor Adolf Hitler was racing by air to Munich to deliver an address in anticipation of the forthcoming elections.

Await Hitler's Arrival

Both foreign office and propaganda ministry officials said that not until Hitler arrived in Munich and considered the situation could any statement be issued outlining Germany's attitude toward the invitation.

A visit by the Italian ambassador to Berlin, Bernardo D. Attolico, to the foreign office gave rise to the belief that he had assured the German government Italy is unlikely to join in any move to impose sanctions against the Reich for violating the Locarno pact and the Versailles treaty in remilitarizing the Rhineland.

Though Hitler's scheduled address was hinged on the elections, it was expected to be another pronouncement to which the ears of the world would be attuned.

Stars Join Hollywood Rebels

Marlene Dietrich

George Raft

Grace Moore

Hollywood's growing list of stars on strike added to its roster Marlene Dietrich and Grace Moore after long-smoldering studio difficulties broke into the open. La Dietrich abandoned work on her new picture, protesting her part as a chambermaid was "unsuitable to her dignity," and was replaced by Margaret Sullivan, while Grace Moore declared she was through with pictures until Hollywood "learned to treat her as a human being." To this union five children were out on a picture in which he was to have been co-starred with Carole Lombard, and James Cagney sued Warner Bros. because he was "compelled to make too many pictures." Cagney also demanded a salary increase.

DAVEY-YOUNG
TILT SETS OFF
OHIO CONTESTSYoung Files Hour Before
Deadline; Says: "I'll Be Next Governor"DAVEY'S POULSON
GOES INTO ACTIONFacing Party Breach,
Plans "Weeding Out"
Of CandidatesBY JOHN H. COLBURN
Associated Press Staff Writer

COLUMBUS, March 14.—A Democratic gubernatorial contest between Gov. Martin L. Davey and Congressman-at-Large Stephen M. Young sent into high gear today Ohio's pre-primary intra-party battles over selection of candidates for the November election.

Young, strong New Deal supporter, filed his candidacy petitions an hour before Friday's deadline and departed immediately for Washington with the assertion: "I'll be Ohio's next governor."

Faces Party Breach

Faced with a wide-open party breach, Governor Davey turned to Democratic Chairman Francis W. Poulson, who said "we'll try to get some semblance of a sane ticket" by "weeding out" candidates in order to present a harmonious front at the primary.

Entered as a "back-stop" for Young was Marvin C. Harrison of Cleveland. Informed political circles interpreted his entry as a move to insure opposition for Davey. Charles H. Hubbell of Cleveland, a frequent candidate for various offices, also was in the race.

The Republican organization appeared united behind the candidacy of Atty Gen. John W. Brickner for the governorship nomination. His only foe was a 34-year-old Defiance dentist, C. W. Kimble, Townsend pension plan supporter.

Ten Democrats and 11 Republicans seeking the two remaining seats for each party left the congressman-at-large race wide open. Two regular term positions will be filled next November and two Columbus men will seek the seat vacated when Congressman-at-Large Charles V. Truax of Bucyrus died last August. It will be a short term seat.

Poulson Plans Conference

Chairman Poulson planned conferences with various candidates which he said would be designed to persuade as many as possible to withdraw in order to avert conflicts that might endanger party success.

"This doesn't mean incumbents," he added.

One of Poulson's chief "harmony" problems will revolve about six Democratic candidates for nomination as state auditor. Republican Joseph T. Tracy, who has held the position 16 years, was unopposed in his party.

Among the six was George Eppley, chairman of Ohio's liquor board and vigorous supporter of the Davey administration. Others were Joseph A. Lutz, Montgomery

Young Wife Wins Fight Against Millions

Pretty Juanita Borg Given
Custody of 15-
Month-Old Son

CHICAGO, March 14.—Pretty Juanita Borg, 19, won a complete victory today in her court battle with her millionaire father-in-law, George W. Borg, for custody of her fifteen-month-old son.

Denies Father-In-Law

Denying the petition of the manufacturer who is chairman of the Borg-Warner Co. for a habeas corpus writ for return of the boy, Judge Michael Feinberg held "the right of a child" to a mother's care supersedes even the advantages which an indulgent grandparent could provide, and sustained her right to keep the infant she took from the Borg summer home in Delavan, Wis., last summer.

Ending of the two-day court hearing in her favor brought from the young mother only the comment that she was "very happy."

She hid her face in her hands and friends led her to an ante-room where her blond fifteen-year-old son played seriously with his shoes.

Her father-in-law, whose "good intentions" Judge Feinberg said he had no intention of reflecting on, accepted the ruling "willingly," he said.

Concededly a Devoted Mother

Judge Feinberg's decision made it plain he was ruling only on the matter of custody of young George Marshall Borg, Jr. here.

It was on the basis of the legal wardship established for him over the child last summer in Walworth county, Wis., that the senior Borg sought a writ for the boy's return from his mother. He claimed she was an "unfit person" to have charge of the rearing.

To this, Judge Feinberg's opinion said there was "not even a contention of the lack of moral appreciation on the part of the mother. She became a mother at a very early age yet the petitioner (George W. Borg) gave her credit for being a devoted mother during the nursing period."

Borg Has Lived His Life

"Mr. Borg has lived his life in raising his own family and I think he makes a grievous mistake in trying to raise an infant," added the judge.

Mrs. Anita Borg and son

"He cannot live the lives of these young people. If these people were old enough to be married with their parents' consent, they are old enough to take care of themselves. History has too often repeated itself in the case of too much parental interference in the affairs of young married couples."

Juanita, her face white and strained beneath a perky brown hat, had testified she signed guardianship papers because her young husband had feared his father would "cut him off" unless she did so.

"Judge, I would do anything to keep my baby," she said, her fingers twined around a slender wedding ring. "I'd even scrub floors."

Indications of one of the warmest primary campaigns in a number of years were apparent today as candidates rallied their forces and prepared for a ballot drive leading up to the May 12 voting.

As the petition deadline—6:30 p. m. Friday—arrived, it found 10 Republicans seeking two county commissioner places, and prospects of hot battles for prosecutor, clerk of courts, sheriff and recorder.

C. McCandless, Salem veterinarian, who filed some time ago as commissioner, remained the lone northern Columbiana county candidate until the recent filing of Harry Weikart of the Damascus rd., a former candidate for this post. East Liverpool has three in the race.

Scott in Prosecutor Race

Atty Cecil K. Scott, former city solicitor of Salem, filed his petition for nomination as prosecuting attorney. The last day of filing also brought in Atty Robert Hall of Lisbon. Frank Springer of East Palestine, assistant prosecutor, who seeks to succeed George Lafferty, rounded out the trio.

Deputy Sheriff George Hayes, who seeks to become sheriff, will face opposition from W. J. Barlow, former sheriff, of East Liverpool, and Homer Veon, former Salem city patrolman.

The recorder contest has four entries on the Republican ticket, including John Coleman and Richard Wilson of East Liverpool; Hilton Hart of New Waterford; and Lena H. Johnson of Lisbon, former commissioners' clerk.

The Democratic county slate has contests for only two jobs. M. K. Duty of Wellsville and Harry Gossney of Columbiana are in the sheriff race, while Arnold Devon of East Liverpool, incumbent, and John O'Donnell of Salineville, want the coroner nomination.

Here is the complete list of candidates:

SYSTEMS

In at least six of the 47 states which have two-house state legislatures there is agitation for a change to the one-house system adopted by Nebraska. In every case the agitation is feeble. There is no prospect of change in the near future. Other states will watch Nebraska to see how the one-house system operates in that state.

The motive for interest in eliminating the bicameral legislature is the frequent failure of that traditional system to operate satisfactorily. For the last year Ohio has witnessed an almost complete collapse of legislative operation. It does not know whether or not a one-house system would be more satisfactory, but many Ohioans feel that it couldn't be less satisfactory.

In New York, Missouri, California, Wisconsin and Illinois, according to a recent survey, the trend of popular opinion is in the same direction. Legislators are inviting reform by their own failure to perform satisfactorily. Eventually, unless they succeed in reforming themselves, it will be found desirable to reform the systems under which they serve.

Obviously, no system is any better than the human beings who attempt to work under it. A one-house legislature would be as bad as a two-house legislature if its members were equally bad. A two-house legislature, on the other hand, would be as good, perhaps better, than a one-house system if its members were equally good. There is no magic in systems which isn't put there by human beings.

TWO FORCES IN GERMANY

It may be assumed that reoccupation of the demilitarized Rhineland was inevitable. Yet, unless France had made a treaty with Russia for mutual aid in case of attack by Germany, Chancellor Hitler would have lacked an excuse to take the momentous step.

The chain of circumstances, of course, has many more links in it than that. France would not have made an alliance with Russia if Germany had not broken the Treaty of Versailles. Germany, on the other hand, would not have broken the Treaty of Versailles if the treaty had not imposed restrictions which Germany could not endure. Those restrictions would not have been imposed if France had not believed it necessary to take drastic steps to insure itself against an ancient enemy.

Chancellor Hitler's repeated overtures of friendship for France in the current crisis are, therefore, significant. It is apparent in all the chancellor's speeches that he does not regard France as an inevitable enemy, but rather as a potential friend. There is evidently some more potent force at work than the traditional enmity between Germany and France. Probably there are two forces.

Russia is one—Russia which Chancellor Hitler relies at every opportunity—Russia which is the focus of German hatred and the imagined threat to German security. It is war between Russia and Germany which is to be feared more than war between Germany and France. Obviously, from the German viewpoint no more offensive alliance could have been made than that of Russia and France.

The second force is Germany's internal economic condition. The Nazi dictatorship is staking its existence on manipulation of a shaky credit structure. It is under terrific pressure to maintain national morale. The more its attention can be distracted by foreign affairs the less time it will have to brood on its domestic affairs.

O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

NEW YORK, March 14—Whenever something gets out of whack around this house they have to send out for a plumber, carpenter or electrician. And run up a bill. They never think of Odd the Odd Job Wizard. All I'm fit for is to hunch over a typewriter and wear myself out writing pieces.

Look! I'm all skin and bones from sitting there thinking and staring. No variety. The squirrel in the cage. Twenty years ago this very night. There's no sense to that. See how my mind wanders! Anytime you see a loose mind, step on it. It's probably mine and no use to me any more.

Whenever one reaches the stage of filling page after page of a scratch pad with curlicues or penciling mustaches on magazine cover girls, they'll soon be taking the knives and forks away and hiding the matches. You know what! I believe they have started whispering campaigns, too.

If I turn round quickly on the street, people are nudging each other. Even dogs bark as I pass. And I used to talk to myself only in the bathroom. Now I'm always mumbling, laughing out loud, singing or clucking like a wet hen. It shows what sticking to one thing year after year will do.

But this is the day I pop out of my rut. Everybody is away for the evening. I have the house to myself. Grand time to change the routine. Fix a few things that need fixing. That cock-eyed chandelier in the entrance hall, for example. It has been that way since Raymond Dickson chinned himself on it after two snorts of Old Belmont.

All one needs to straighten a crooked chandelier is a pair of pliers and a step ladder. A few twists here and there, the tightening of a dingbat, et voila! But that isn't the way they do it around our house. No they must send for an expert electrician who arrives with two helpers, spring fever movements, and enough tools to open a hardware department in Macy's.

I know how to handle step-ladders all right, I learned a lesson from those babies, too. The last time I tried to carry one through the house, the phone rang, I turned quickly to answer and swept everything off a mantle, poked out a window pane and pinched a row of blood blisters on my hand as big as marbles. The way to carry a step-ladder is perpendicular and squarely in front of you and never turn around until you set it down. There have been as many homes broken up by careless step-ladder carriers as by Broadway cuties with a lisp. That's the way this column goes. Not only bright and entertaining but chucks in a free step-ladder lesson.

A moment while I find the step-ladder. It must be somewhere in the kitchen—that is servants' hall. See, there it is all painted white and lovely. Never too busy for compliments. Even a trade last for a step-ladder. Always adjust a step-ladder carefully. Too many people just drag one out and scamper skyward when it is still tippy. And next they know they are being pushed up to the park in a wheel chair for a sunning. An expert runner-upper should touch his shoes to resin—like this—and ascend slowly on the balls of the feet, softly like a panther in high grass and here we are at the top. Notice the grace, the litheness, the stance!

Far back as I remember the McIntyres were step-ladder people. Nothing fancy. Just the substantial sort of step-ladderists that have made this nation what it is. Lots of step-ladderists do their stuff waving, bowing and blowing kisses. But we are without such frills. Now to fix the chandelier. Somehow I'm a little too far away. And I don't want to reach too strenuously. I tear easily under the wing. A second while I run down and push up a little closer. There! Here, by a simple twist, the chandelier goes back in place. . . I'm glad nobody was around when that happened. Down we came, chandelier and at least a bushel of ceiling. I don't feel so good. That old ringing in the ears again. And notice how one hip hikes up when I try to walk.

I couldn't have a quiet evening at home reading Oppenheim or listening to Major Bowes. I have to be galloping up and down step-ladders and doing ceiling drops with chandeliers. No wonder they whisper and nudge when I come around. I can think—ouch!—of only one thing nuttier—and that's fruit cake.

FROM THE NEWS FILES

FORTY YEARS AGO
(Issue of March 14, 1896.)

W. F. Schwartz, superintendent of the Christian Sunday school, gave an address at the boys' rally at the Y. M. C. A. yesterday.

Mrs. Catherine Darlington, probably Salem's oldest resident, celebrated her 89th birthday anniversary yesterday. George D. Hunt of Green st., celebrated his 77th birthday anniversary.

THIRTY YEARS AGO
(Issue of March 14, 1906.)

The heaviest snowfall of the season came March 12, starting about noon Sunday, and about eight inches of snow fell before it stopped at midnight.

Rochester, N. Y.—The long and eventful life of Susan B. Anthony, noted advocate of female suffrage, closed with her death at 12:40 yesterday morning.

Five or six years ago 312 large bicycle factories were in operation in the United States and about 30 million dollars was invested in the industry. Today there are only 97 factories and the capital invested only about six million dollars. No fact could more eloquently describe the rise and decline of a fad. Will the same be true of the automobile business?

TWENTY YEARS AGO
(Issue of March 14, 1916.)

Miss Mary C. Wright returned Saturday from Philadelphia and Chester, Pa., where she spent the last few months.

With the anticipated return of spring weather in the very near future, members of the Salem Golf club company are planning to complete the project which had to be postponed last fall for lack of time, and expect soon to purchase or lease a large tract of land near the city for the construction of a ninehole golf course.

A number of local marksmen are planning to become members of the National Rifle association being formed in Sebring, with Alliance and Salem residents included in the membership.

A Review of the Day's News

By Arthur Brisbane

Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

KING EDWARD asks the House of Commons in making up his "civil list" to consider the possibility of his marriage.

"His Majesty desires that the contingency of his marriage be taken into account, so that, in that event, there should be provision for Her Majesty the Queen, and the members of his Majesty's family correspond to the provisions which the House of Commons has been willing to make in like circumstances in the past."

It is a request, not a command. APPARENTLY the king contemplates children, as part of marriage.

The supply of princesses with royal blood sufficiently genuine is running low. But a few are left, reasonably good looking, and, far more important in a royal marriage, healthy.

IT WOULD be difficult to believe King Edward not eager to perpetuate his line, creating for himself on the throne of England as long as it may last the only kind of immortality of which man can be sure. To be the link that breaks in a long chain is unpleasant.

SPORTSMEN are horrified; The Vancouver Department of Fisheries says the black bear, flipping large salmon from the streams with his paws, is not satisfied with catching what he wants to eat.

"Thousands of salmon are killed by black bears on the spawning ground, not for food, but for the sheer love of fishing."

You could not imagine a human fisherman doing that, or shooting any deer or other animal unless he actually needed it for food.

Something should be done about the depraved black bears.

EARL D. BABST, of the American Sugar Refining Company, asks the government whether it plans to continue raw sugar refining here in the United States, where it pays wages to American workers, or whether the policy is to be continued of encouraging sugar refining in the tropics, the Philippines, Hawaii, Porto Rico and Cuba.

This country gives to all that produce raw sugar a market without which they could not live; and it would seem reasonable to let United States workmen and United States industries have for themselves at least the payrolls and profits that come of refining the sugar.

REFINERIES in this country are working at half capacity, three recently have been closed, two are being torn down, which means abolishing payrolls. Mr. Babst says:

"Every pound of refined sugar brought from overseas replaces a pound that would be refined at home, reduces domestic payrolls and domestic purchases of cotton, coal, oil, lumber, paper, power and supplies."

Many feel that America's vast consumption of sugar should contribute something to American industry and payrolls besides the privilege of paying for the product.

NORMAN PEACOCK killed a man and wife when attempting to steal shoes. Night before last, beside the death chair in Ohio Penitentiary, he asked with a wry smile:

"Will it hurt?" He flipped a cigaret from his lip, sat down and his question was answered. A guard had replied to his question:

"I don't know I never tried it." The murderer, who knows now that crime does not pay, was 23 years old. From that electric chair, according to religious belief, he went where it really does hurt, although the right kind of repentance at the last moment might have him.

THE GOVERNOR of Campeche, in Mexico, after keeping all churches in his state closed for more than a year and a half, now permits all to reopen.

A fight against religion often starts violently to wind up feebly. Rulers and governments rise and fall, religion, modified from century to century, goes on forever. Nothing more true than Voltaire's statement.

"If there had not been a God, it would have been necessary to invent one."

Men must have some answer to questions beyond their intelligence, and religion alone supplies it.

dered 512 engines of 1,000 horsepower each for Army bombing planes, expected to fly heavy bombers 250 miles an hour, and have a cruising range of 2,900 miles. Encouraging news.

What is needed is 1,000 bombing planes that could fly either ocean, through the stratosphere, 500 miles an hour enabling Uncle Sam to say truthfully to all nations:

"Bother me and I will blow your capital cities off the earth. Let me alone and I shall let you alone."

PRURITIS

"PRURITIS" is the name given a rather common inflammation of the skin. It may effect any part of the body. The victim complains of intense itching of the involved part.

There may be efforts at relief by scratching. The lower outlet of the body, the vent, is perhaps the most commonly involved area. In this case the trouble is spoken of as pruritis ani. Sometimes the discomfort is so marked as to prevent sitting.

Not infrequently the disease is confused with other disorders. It may be mistaken for hemorrhoids or piles. The latter may lead to pruritis but it is not the sole cause.

Common Cause

A common cause for this distressing disturbance is irritation of the parts due to constipation, inflammation or infection of the low bowels, or some form of parasites or worms. Fissures, fistulas, sore skin tabs or polyps are other causes that must not be disregarded.

Because the trouble may arise from one of so many things, it may be difficult to trace the cause. Sometimes it is necessary to have special tests and examinations to discover it. It may require a great deal of patience on the part of the physician and patient before the exact cause is located.

In every case rigid cleanliness is absolutely essential to relief from the itching. After each elimination the parts should be carefully cleansed with a soft cloth or paper, moistened with warm water or boric acid solution. Avoid ointments and salves unless they have been prescribed by your doctor.

Baths Beneficial

The underwear should be soft and large enough to permit free movement. Tight and poorly-fitted garments will cause pressure, pulling and irritation. Until the acute inflammation has subsided avoid prolonged sitting in one position.

Warm tub baths are extremely useful. Thoroughly dry the skin after bathing and apply a pure talcum powder to the parts.

At times almost miraculous relief is obtained by attention to the diet. All spices, peppers and excesses in the use of salt and other condiments must be avoided. It is well to exclude from the diet hot breads and fried and greasy foods. Drink a glass of water every hour.

Answers to Health Queries
H. B. Q.—What can be done for sugar diabetes? The patient is a man about 50 years of age.

A.—Proper diet and care will bring about increased comfort and relief in such cases. For further particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

Mrs. W. W. Q.—What should a woman of 23, 5 feet 6 inches tall weigh? 2: What can be done to overcome boils? I have been troubled for over a year and especially during the past few months, have had a boil nearly every two weeks.

A.—You should weigh about 133 pounds—this would be about average for your age and height. 2: Boils can usually be traced to some underlying disturbance. Make every effort to improve your general health and resistance. For full particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

Dr. Copeland is glad to answer inquiries from readers who send addressed stamped envelopes with their questions. Address all letters to Dr. Copeland in care of this newspaper at its main office in this city.

Statement

The second item in the financial statement is the three office buildings which the company owns and occupies. These are the main office at Youngstown, and the branch offices at Struthers and Salem. The original cost of these was about a million seven hundred fifty thousand dollars, but their cost has been depreciated regularly at the government rate of two per cent per annum, and they are now carried at a million one hundred and fifty thousand dollars—practically two-thirds of the original cost. They could not be replaced today for anywhere near that sum. In each building there is space for rent, most of which has been continuously occupied at a fair rental.

Thought for the Week

"Our hearts and thoughts center on a heroic figure. Heroic and challenging because for the sake of principle it embraced death rather than enter into a compromise with conventions, convenience, or expediency. Our age is one in which such heroism is none too frequent. Yes, we may doubt that this ideal is truly appreciated. From the viewpoint of most people today, a viewpoint which focuses on advantage, agreement and life without struggle, he is a fool who for the sake of inner conviction or truth, as he knows it, is prepared to accept all the chagrin of society, all the disadvantages of an unpopular position. Through such as these is the world remade. The salvation from ignorance and the blinding of a luminous path to a better life and condition has always sprung forth from the heart of such.

"So our salvation from sin and death and hell—our hope for eternity, our power for a happier and more blessed life now, sprang from the heart of Jesus who despised not shame but chose death. In His passion-adventure the world labored Him a fool. But what of it? Are not the heroes of the hour soon forgotten? Do not those who stimulate the popular imagination and are therefore carried on the shoulders of public acclaim soon found let down on the sand of the commonplace when the tide recedes? Time, as in other things, is the test of deed and heroism.

"Jesus lived more vitally today than 20 centuries ago. So His vitality and influence will grow with the passing centuries.

"In losing His life, he found it. That is the secret of the heroism of Jesus."

This is God's way for humanity to overcome the world. He that overcometh the same, shall be clothed in white raiment, and I will blot his name out of the book of life, but I will confess his name before my Father and before His Angel."

11 a. m.—Gospel message subject "The Effective Prayer of a Righteous Man Availeth Much." "Nowhere is the marvelous power of prayer more strikingly evident than in the seventeenth and eighteenth chapters of Kings. The discouraged members can only see the laxity and failures and errors of other members. They have ceased to believe God is able to bring order out of chaos. The result is the brook of God's provident grace is dried up. The words of our text point to the remedy for all cases like this."

Members and friends are again reminded that the morning service is the only one held in the church during the cold days.

The Wednesday evening cottage prayer meetings are held regularly. The place and time is announced after each morning service.

Leetonia St. Patrick's Church

LEETONIA, March 14.—From the reading of the first mass in the private home of Martin Gamon of Franklin Square by Rev. Father George Peters on Dec. 16, 1861, until the present day, the Catholic faith has continued to grow in this vicinity.

The St. Patrick's Catholic church here was an outgrowth of that first mission conducted by Rev. Father Peters. It was in December of 1864, after Father Ignatius Ludwig had been supplying the mission here, that the services were discontinued at Franklin Square and opened at Leetonia.

At this progress of the Catholic faith here, an occasional mass was said by Father Martines in the old Leetonia school house, which has long since been changed into a residence.

Later Father Francis Welch, a professor in St. Louis college at Louisville, O., conducted similar services, after which Father Michael Mulcahey of St. Louis said mass on two Sundays of each month at the public school building.

Father E. W. J. Lindesmith took charge of the service Oct. 1, 1868. He moved from St. John's church in Canton to St. Joseph's church in Alliance and ministered also in the following missions, which were included in his pastorate: Leetonia, Salem, Homeworth, Lima and Aviator.

On Oct. 9, 1868, Father Lindesmith said mass in Leetonia at the home of James Ready, but on Oct. 11 of the same year services were again resumed at the Leetonia school house. In May of 1872, Father Lindesmith moved to Leetonia and kept only Salem as an additional charge.

Leetonia, a small and hospitable village, welcomed Father Lindesmith and it was largely due to his strenuous efforts and faithful service that there was a great uplift in the church of his faith and that it won a permanent abiding place in this locality.

A parish was established here May 24, 1872, and was named St. Barbara after a mining town of the same name and the patroness Saint of miners. Thus Leetonia mission, founded in 1868, developed into a parish.

Father Lindesmith, in his genial, kind-hearted way, said of the Leetonia people: "At my first arrival at Leetonia I was treated with all respect and love."

After ministering in the mission charge here from 1868 until 1872 and in the pastorate from 1872 until 1880, Father Lindesmith was removed to Fort Keogh, Montana territory, the headquarters of Nelson and Miles, who were leading a war against the Sioux Indians.

During Father Lindesmith's ministry and through the efficient, progressive methods he employed, the present church property was acquired. The first purchase was a lot on Main st., bought from the Cherry Valley Coal Co., for a consideration of $50. For the second lot added to the church property, $150 was paid. The third addition was a lot for which $400 was paid, and the fourth acquisition was a lot with a house upon it, bought for $1,800. The fifth lot addition contained a one-room house and was purchased for $2,000. The sixth lot purchased also cost $2,000.

A small frame church was constructed on the newly-acquired property and the Mt. Calvary cemetery on the Leetonia-Franklin Square rd., was purchased.

Succeeding Father Lindesmith as minister here came Father Fitzgerald in July of 1860. Father Fitzgerald was taken ill March 5, 1882, and died in the hospital a short time later.

Rev. John Desmond filled the vacancy created by Father Fitzgerald's death and following him, in order named, came: Right Rev. James O'Leary, Right Rev. Clement Triebner and Rev. John McGlone.

During the time Father Desmond served the parish, the present spacious church home was built. Dedication services opened the church shortly after its completion, and with the laying of the cornerstone of the present structure the name St. Barbara that was given to the first white frame building, ceased to exist and a new name, St. Patrick's, bestowed.

Rev. E. J. Murphy occupied the pastorate from October of 1884 until October of 1904, when he was taken by death.

In January of 1905, Rev. Father D. B. Kirby became pastor and remained until March of 1923. Under his leadership a fine large parsonage was built, adjoining the church. His genial kindness and sympathetic attributes endeared him to all of his parishioners and when he was sent to Louisville a petition was formulated and signed by more than 700 persons in opposition to his leaving St. Patrick's church, but without effect.

In September of 1923 the church celebrated its 50th anniversary, with a host of prominent officials of the Catholic church in attendance.

Of considerable note at the time of the anniversary observance was the fact that three Leetonia men who achieved fame in the Catholic church took part in the activities.

The late Rev. Father John Cavanaugh, who served as president of Notre Dame college, was one of these men, while the others were Rev. Father James Ready and Rev. Father Anthony Dean.

The latter is now Rt. Rev. Monsignor Dean, pastor of the Queen of the Holy Rosary cathedral in Toledo. He is a brother of P. J. Dean of Salem.

Since the church anniversary celebration the following pastors have served the parish: Father Richard Gibbons, Father John Ruffing, Father Francis Lavery and Father T. T. Marchant, who is the present minister.

Sermon Topic For English Lutheran Service Announced

"Will You Watch With Him" is the subject of the sermon scheduled for the morning worship of the Holy Trinity English Lutheran church tomorrow. Rev. George D. Keister will be in charge of the services.

The complete list of services and announcements for the week are as follows:

Sunday school 9:45 (Luke 11:1-13). Lewis Hirst, Supt.

"Prayer is the breath of the spiritual life. As the taking in of fresh and pure air into the lungs, carries on the processes of life, so does prayer nourish and sustain the life of the soul or spirit. It is natural for the devout person to pray. Prayer sustains fellowship with God. Prayer life gives expression to our thanks to God. The practice of prayer will cultivate humility in a person. Prayer offers us the opportunity to confess our sins to God. Prayer gives strength to meet temptations and to overcome sin."

Morning worship 11. Sermon. "Will You Watch With Him?"

"There are quitters in every walk of life. They are not very welcome company in any group. Some of the disciples of Jesus were all too ready to give up when they faced a trying and difficult place. They went with Jesus but halted when this discipleship met danger and some patient waiting. They forsook Him and fled when He was arrested. Three of them slept when Our Lord was praying in the dark Gethsemane. The test of the fidelity and faithfulness of a Christian is whether he or she will stand patiently by the side of the Master in the work and labors of the Kingdom. It takes just this perseverance to carry on the work of Christ."

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." (Heb. 11:1.)

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science text-book: "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "A New Testament writer plainly describes faith, a quality of mind, as 'the substance of things hoped for.' 'Ideas are tangible and real to immortal consciousness, and they have the advantage of being eternal.'"

"In proportion as the belief disappears that life and intelligence are in or of matter, the intellectual facts of being are seen, and their only idea of intelligence is in God." (p. 279.)

Attractive Program Marks O.E.S. Anniversary Meeting

Of the 32 charter members still living, 22 were present last night for the silver anniversary banquet of the Salem chapter, No. 334, Order of the Eastern Star, at the temple.

The dinner was served by the executive committee. The hall was beautifully decorated in royal blue and silver for the occasion. Blue streamers ran to the corners of the hall from a cluster of silver balloons in the center. Tables were attractively appointed with silver vases of pink snapdragons and pussy-willows. Tall pink candles in silver holders lighted the tables and at each place were little silver ships.

Honor Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins

Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Jenkins of Winona, worthy patron and matron of the chapter, officers and the choir were in charge of the arrangements for the celebration. A special feature of the evening, arranged by members as a surprise for the matron and patron, was a mock wedding ceremony performed by Rev. H. J. Thompson, in celebration of the recent silver wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins.

Miss Bernice Barnett, accordionist, played for the guests as they entered the hall for the dinner. Following the dinner, Miss Martha Baller entertained with two vocal selections, "Blue Danube" (Strauss) and "The Little Damsel" (Novello). She was accompanied at the piano by Homer Taylor.

Mrs. Jenkins extended a welcome to the charter members and other Eastern Stars and visitors. The celebration was attended by about 150 members and 25 visitors. Eleanor Eberwein played two violin arrangements, accompanied by Cleo Santee. Her selection were "Minute Waltz" (Chopin) and "Dancing Doll" (Poldini).

Reviews History

Mrs. Burr Loeper gave a brief history of the organization and expansion of the chapter, tracing its progress from the first meeting held at the home of Dr. and Mrs. William Linn. She described the first inspection on Sept. 11, 1911, in charge of Mrs. Ella B. Shearer of Marysville, past grand matron of Ohio, who is still living. An interesting letter was read from Mrs. Shearer.

Mrs. Loeper pointed out that at the first inspection there were 210 members and guests present. J. Ernest Tear of Cleveland was the instituting officer for the chapter and Vivian A. Cowgill of St. Louis was the first worthy grand patron.

Mrs. Loeper introduced two guests of the chapter, Mrs. E. J. Foulke, mother of Mrs. R. F. White, who has been a member of the O. E. S. for 59 years; and Grover Hall, past grand sentinel of Ohio, who celebrated his 84th birthday yesterday.

Mrs. Loeper named the first officer of Salem chapter, headed by Mrs. Carrie B. Turner as worthy matron. They were: Associate matron, Miss Ella Kirkbride; secretary, Mrs. Charles Wilson; Ruth, Mrs. Robert W. Moore of Canton; Martha, Mrs. Wilbur Gamble; Electa, Mrs. C. B. Hunt; conductress, Mrs. John Bartchey; associate conductress, Mrs. James Stitt; Esther, Mrs. L. S. Converse; warder, Mrs. Charles Steele; sentinel, Mrs. Maud Thomas; marshal, Mrs. Samuel Koehnrich; organist, Mrs. Edith Smith Dougherty.

Gifts For Charter Members

Each charter member present last evening received a silver teaspoon as a gift from the chapter. Following the history of the group the mock wedding was performed. Mrs. John Hundertmark played the wedding march while past matrons and patrons, with John Noble as best man and Mrs. Carrie Turner as matron of honor, were attendants. Mrs. Jenkins was escorted to the altar by Charles McCormick.

The conductress and associate conductress, Mrs. James Andrews and Mrs. Earl Beardsmore, led the wedding party. Mrs. Glenn Harding sang "I Love You Truly".

After the reading of the ceremony, Mrs. Gertrude Stewart presented Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins a gift from the chapter. Mrs. J. E. Griffin of Columbiana entertained with two vocal selections, "By the Bend in the River" (Edwards) and an Irish song. Mrs. Jenkins thanked her committees, officers, choir and O. E. S. members for the gift and for the cooperation given her in planning the anniversary celebration.

Following Mrs. Jenkins' address, members and guests enjoyed a minstrel show, presented by the choir members and officers. Solo numbers in the minstrel were: Vocal, "Ting-a-Ling" by Mrs. Forrest Coy of Massillon; vocal, "Just an Echo in the Valley" by Mrs. Glenn Harding; vocal, "Asleep in the Deep" by Mrs. Vance McBane; vocal, "Okey-Dokey" by Mrs. Myron Kelley; vocal, "Old Heidelberg" by Misses Isabelle and LaVaughn Simpson; reading, "Dark Town Strutters Ball" by Mrs. Henry Steinbach; vocal duet, "Ida" by Mrs. Jenkins and Mrs. Virgil Battin; vocal, "There's a Home in Wyoming" by Miss Isabelle Simpson; vocal, "Winter Wonderland" by Mrs. Harding; vocal, "Music Goes Round" by Mrs. Jenkins.

county auditor, Jacob C. Mong, Summit county auditor, Elmer J. Carey of Kenton, Joseph T. Ferguson of Barberton and John H. Turner of Shaker Heights.

The state treasurer's office was the least sought. Harry S. Day, Republican incumbent, sought re-nomination and was opposed by Lewis A. Hanford of Cleveland. Clarence H. Knisley of Bainbridge was the only Democrat to seek the position, held by a Republican since 1919.

Two leading Democrats vied for the lieutenant governorship. House Speaker J. Freer Bittinger, chief patronage dispenser for the Davey administration, lined up against Paul P. Yoder of Eaton, senate floor leader and frequent critic of administration policies.

Five On G. O. P. Side

Five Republicans contested for this position, among them Paul M. Herbert of Columbus, nominee in 1934.

Dennis Dunlavy, of Ashtabula, one of Governor Davey's closest advisers, Herber S. Duffy of Columbus, severe Davey critic, and Lucas County Prosecutor Frazier Reams, gave Poulson another problem in "weeding out" candidates for attorney general.

Thomas J. Herbert, C. B. McClinck of Canton, John H. Price, of Cleveland, were in the Republican attorney generalship race.

Contesting for the secretary of state's position were Democrats William J. Kennedy of Cleveland, and Dwight L. Matchette, of Greenville, Ohio senate clerk, and Republicans Earl Griffith, Mt. Glead publisher, Edward J. Hummel of Cincinnati, and Dale Stump of Columbus.

Secretary of State George Myers entered the race for one of two vacancies on the supreme court bench. He and Judge Will P. Stephenson, present court member and Democrat of West Union, will be unopposed.

Judge Roy H. Williams of Sandusky, also a court member, and William L. Hart of Alliance, who once served a six-week term on the state bench, were unopposed for the Republican nomination.

140 Congress Candidates

In the congressional race, besides the 21 seeking the regular congressman-at-large terms, there were 140 candidates in the state's 22 districts for nomination to congress. All incumbents sought reelection, except 11th district Congressman Mel G. Underwood, who recently received a federal judgeship appointment.

The 17th, or Youngstown district, led the list with the most candidates—14, ten Democrats and four Republicans, for one position.

Among the congressman-at-large delegates was Lieut. Gov. Harold G. Mosier of Cleveland, who announced as a candidate for governor but withdrew and promised to support Young.

Besides Mosier on the Democratic side for nominations for the regular congressman-at-large places were Milton S. Cox of McArthur, chief of the state beer division; Francis W. Durbin, of Lima, son of W. W. Durbin, register of the U. S. treasury; Joseph W. Fletcher, of Hamilton, former assistant state director of education; State Rep. Jesse J. Gilbert of Farmersville; John McSweeney, former congressman and state welfare director; John W. Pattison, son of the late Gov. John W. Pattison; Kent A. Buchanan of Cleveland; Joseph J. Devney of Cleveland, and William C. Graves of Maple Heights.

Among the Republicans was George H. Bender, a Republican congressman-at-large nominee in 1934; former U. S. Senator Charles Dick, of Akron; former State Sen. J. Eugene Roberts of Youngstown; former State Rep. L. L. Marshall, of Euclid; M. Herbert Hoover, of Akron; Raymond J. Jeffreys, of Lakewood; Alexander H. Martin of Cleveland; Benjamin F. Reading, of Toledo; S. A. Ringer, of Leesburg and Joe Thomas of Cleveland.

"DAUGHTERS OF VENUS"

by ROBERT TERRY SHANNON

SYNOPSIS

In the dining room of a Los Angeles hotel, Juliet Rankin is approached by Denton Terhune, well known San Francisco lawyer. Attracted by Juliet's beauty and aloofness, he asks if he might chat with her. During their conversation, Terhune tells Juliet that she is searching for something more than love and marriage—a breathless something you cannot name.

Terhune introduces Mary to Madame Hubert, wealthy beauty expert, whom he describes as the oddest and most interesting woman in Los Angeles, and her handsome, young manager, Thomas O'Hara, who is in a serious condition at the beauty institute due to her heart being too weak to stand the ether administered during a facial operation. Madame Hubert, however, appears unconcerned. She compliments Juliet on her beauty and offers her a position. O'Hara objects strenuously, saying, "Take my advice and keep out of it. I don't like you and you don't like me—we would never get on together."

Madame claims O'Hara fears Juliet is after his job. He leaves in anger. Juliet wonders why O'Hara affects her so strangely. Then it dawns upon her that he resembles her dead sweetheart. Madame takes Juliet to the institute with the vague hope that she may be able to help her with Mrs. Gottlieb.

CHAPTER IV

An elevator, with oily smoothness, shot them to the top floor of the pleasantly scented building. A wide corridor, thickly carpeted and adorned with objects d'art, led to Madame Hubert's splendid office.

It was here that Juliet was introduced to Franz Von Guerdon, the Heidelberg graduate whose fame in plastic surgery was international. Fair and tall, Von Guerdon had something of military exactness in his bearing. Fame had come to him while he was still young. His lean features, shadowed with a hint of Prussian arrogance, were studious and unsmiling. In the matter of apparel his tailoring and haberdashery reflected the trans-Atlantic perfection of Bond Street and Saville Row.

At the introduction, he took Juliet's hand and bent forward slightly, as foreigners do. But his keen blue eyes never left her own and she was conscious—deeply and intuitively aware—that sooner or later he would prove difficult said or did—just something she knew.

There was a knock on the door and Von Guerdon, moving gracefully, swung it open. Before them stood a starched white nurse with an expressionless face.

"I think Dr. Von Guerdon might like to glance at the patient," she said in a dreary voice. "Mrs. Gottlieb seems to be passing away."

The door closed softly behind the nurse. She was hurrying back to the bedside. Von Guerdon tossed his cigarette out an open window but made no move to follow. Nor did Madame Hubert show any interest.

"Haven't you better do something?" Juliet asked Von Guerdon, surprised at his indifference.

The tall physician gave her a glance as polished and steely as one of his own instruments.

"I've already done everything possible," he said crisply—and Juliet thought, rather heartlessly, "My presence in the room could have no effect whatever upon Mrs. Gottlieb's heart if it has decided to quit beating."

A frigid grimace—the mere parody of a smile—congealed on Von Guerdon's lips.

"These precious American specialists!" His words had the brittleness of an icicle. "They're amusing in Germany—we—"

"What's Germany got to do with it?" snapped Madame Hubert. "That's a fine excuse—you and your German doctors! Well, you're a German physician and you manage to ruin my business. One dead patient—and pout! Goodbye reputation, goodbye clientele—goodbye everything! Everything, I tell you!"

—and you stand there gibbering about Germany!"

"People have been dying," Von Guerdon pointed out, "since the world began. Medical science, as yet, has found no—"

He halted because Juliet, small and erect and indignant, had sprung to her feet. There was a blaze in her eyes and a fire in her voice that seemed actually to radiate heat.

"This is horrible! Don't you two realize a woman is dying? And neither of you lift a finger to help! You don't care a single bit about her, do you?"

Von Guerdon looked at Juliet, lofty and unperturbed.

"It would be lovely, wouldn't it, if sentiment could save the dying?" he remarked.

A small cool little voice in the back of Juliet's head told her that Von Guerdon had probably done the best he knew. After all, he seemed competent enough. But this faint argument was cried down by the protesting tumult and shouting in the region of her heart. There was something more that could be done in this crisis.

"We must face facts," declared Madame Hubert hopping down briskly from her chair. "Perhaps—before she dies—I should reach my attorney."

Juliet, all at once, was conscious of an inner dominance—an upsurging activity—that destroyed any hesitancy. Her chin rose and she felt inches taller.

"Where's Mrs. Gottlieb's room?" she demanded curtly of Von Guerdon.

"Down the hall, second door on the right."

She brushed past him, so close that she sensed the physical warmth of his body, the mild aroma of his expensive Egyptian cigarettes. He and Madame Hubert were useless in this crisis, both too self-centered to realize their responsibility. Juliet slammed the door behind her—slammed it shut, perhaps, upon her new job and her future.

Down the broad corridor she hurried, over soft mauve carpet, between pastel walls, through the weak but pervading atmosphere of powders, creams and lotions.

An odd place for a woman to be dying!

Somehow indeed, it did seem impolite and tactless to expire in these chic surroundings—this enchanting temple dedicated not to death but to sparkle and beauty and the very gleam of life itself.

Surely death had never been expected here. No appropriate preparations made for such a grisly intruder.

None of this was Juliet's business—she too was an interloper. But it never occurred to her to turn back.

At the second door on the right—a beautiful lacquered door with a small design like a coronet upon it—Juliet entered and disappeared from the world of soft carpets and the mode moderne.

The sick room was all white enamel with a narrow bed, spotless and sinister, standing bleakly upon a sterile glazed floor.

An antiseptic voice spoke to Juliet.

"She's still ticking—but it won't be long now."

The nurse moved back one starched cuff and looked at her wristwatch. With luck she would be home early.

The middle aged, unloved face of Mrs. Gottlieb was immaculately bandaged from chin to crown of head. The woman had the look of a nun—a nun carved out of talow. If she was breathing, that function was not visible.

Juliet stood beside the bed and touched the covers softly with her young living hand. The waxy lips moved ever so slightly. Juliet bent near.

"Mein husband . . ."

Juliet moved a hand—small and warm—and placed it on the cold forehead. Leaning over the still form she whispered something.

Whispered it so softly that even the nurse across the room could not hear.

"Listen darling, you're going to brace up. He's coming here to see you—your husband. Just hang on a little bit longer. He's on his way, and he loves you so much—oh, so very much. Yes—it's true. I'm telling you the truth. You will pull yourself together for him, won't you? Do you hear, do you understand?"

The room suddenly was very quiet, so quiet that Juliet could hear the rattle of distant streetcars, a far off automobile horn, the muffled murmurs of a great city muttering in its sleep.

Once more Mrs. Gottlieb's pallid lips moved. A dry, leaf rustled, and it was the dying woman's voice. "I am waiting . . . for him."

Madame Hubert was still abusing Dr. Von Guerdon when Juliet burst in upon them, a tide of new color under her fresh skin.

"Get that O'Hara on the phone—quick!" she flung out at Madame Hubert. "We've a chance to pull that poor thing through."

A distorted noise rattled in Von Guerdon's throat. "O'Hara—humph!"

But Madame Hubert, with brown shriveled finger, was swiftly dialing the telephone. She would have rung up Satan himself in an emergency.

"Hullo—what is it?"

O'Hara's voice over the phone had a bitter sound. Madame Hubert passed the telephone—a living responsibility—to Juliet.

"I want you to get hold of that man Gottlieb and bring him to his wife immediately," said Juliet boldly into the receiver. "Don't argue, please. Bring him!"

O'Hara's protests, objections, sarcasms, his acid and positive refusal to have any further dealings with the beauty institute or Madame Hubert or the Gottliebs, blasted harmlessly against Juliet's armored determination.

"This is no time for such feeble childishness," she told him incisively. "We're trying to save a woman's life. Gottlieb is probably still dancing at the Ambassador. Will you please be decent enough, Mr. O'Hara, to get into your car and fetch Gottlieb if you have to knock him down and drag him out."

As she spoke into the telephone, Juliet had lifted her chin and there was a cutting lash in her tones that would have made a man of iron wince.

O'Hara hesitated, muttered something that Juliet could not catch, and then—a bang of the telephone.

"All right—dammit!"

Thirty minutes later a frightened and confused Herman Gottlieb, facing his own conscience personified in the cool figure of Juliet Rankin.

And a frightened little man, Mr. Gottlieb turned out to be, with forehead damp and a dull flush pervading the masterful nose which dominated his otherwise negligible countenance.

"But I thought Mrs. Gottlieb was in Milwaukee!" he kept repeating. "Her sister, Jenny, lives in Milwaukee and—"

Nothing, however, deterred Juliet from taking him apart, from pinning his seams and turning him to him the ugly and paltry and trashy other self that had usurped control of his conduct—the cheap and weedy impostor who was not at all the staunchly respectable Gottlieb. As the hideous dissection proceeded unmanly tears sprang into his blinking eyes.

"But I thought my wife was in Milwaukee," explained Mr. Gottlieb again, but finding no consolation in those vacant words.

"And, of course, the poor thing must have known all along we were running around with other women," Juliet went on remorselessly. "Wives always know these things—but what could she do? She could have left you and gone for alimony, but she happened to love you. In good times and bad she stuck to you for twenty years—"

"Thirty years," said Mr. Gottlieb helplessly.

"Thirty years changed her look a lot, didn't they? They spoiled her figure and her complexion, made her showprow and old and sagging. But her love didn't change did it? On the inside she was the same girl you married thirty years ago. And she thought there was only one way to hold you—that she had to compete with the nastily little tramps you chased with. She thought a surgeon's knife could restore her poor old face and make her a girl again."

Olivia de Havilland

When the Easter parade promenades in full swing, and even before, the fashions on display will be more varied than during any spring in recent years. Suits are severely tailored. Blouses sport more fancy trimmings than usual. Design of sleeves is important and shoulders are built up in pronounced style. Capes are smart as part of the suit ensemble such as worn by Carole Lombard. Tricky hats done in the manner of the sweeping chapeau modeled by Olivia de Havilland are in vogue. Another number which promises to win wide favor is the costume worn by Eleanore Whitney, a two-piece suit, semi-tailored with a cape-like collar trimmed with bands of leopard skin. And speaking of swim suits, Joan Blondell sports the last word, a fetching design built on new lines.

3-Month Frigid Blast Breaks 44-Year County Weather Mark

65-Period From Dec. 21 to Feb. 24, Longest Prolonged Cold Spell, Copeland Says

King Winter's blistering attack during December, January and February shattered a 44 year record at the United States weather bureau station at Millport, Observer L. H. Copeland said today.

The 65-day period from Dec. 21, 1935, to Feb. 24, 1936, was the longest "prolonged spell" of cold weather in the history of the bureau, while a snowfall of 42.3 inches this winter was unequalled in the "old fashioned winter days" of grandfather, commented the forecaster. The normal yearly snowfall is 30.2 inches, or one foot short of this winter's total.

"The mercury climbed to the thawing point on only 10 or 12 days during the prolonged attack, and the thaws were of short duration," he pointed out.

"There were no thaws during January, while moderating weather during the latter part of December and until Feb. 24 totaled not more than 100 hours. It was also unusual that no general thaw occurred until the latter part of February.

Heavy snowfalls, Copeland declared, always cause lower temperatures and generally cold winters are accompanied by heavy snowfalls.

Although the winter was the longest on record, it was not the coldest at the Millport station. January, 1913, was the coldest month, with a mean temperature of 13.1 degrees. The mean temperature for February of this year was 19.2 degrees, for January, 21; and for December, 1935, 23.2.

The coldest day ever recorded at Millport station was Jan. 13, 1912, when the mercury registered 28 below zero. The coldest week was from Feb. 8-15, 1899, when the temperature registered 6, -15, -25, -25, -12, -17, -13 and -2, on eight consecutive days.

During the 65-day cold spell, the mercury reached sub-zero on 26 days—four in December, six in January and 10 in February. The average low temperature in December was 16.8 degrees, for January, 13.4, and for February, 8.4. The average high temperatures for the three months were December, 29.6; January, 28.6, and February, 30.

Theater Attractions

Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire will appear at the State Sunday, Monday and Tuesday in their new musical, "Follow the Fleet." Harriet Hilliard, Randolph Scott and Astrid Allwyn are also in the cast.

With seven good tunes by Irving Berlin, songs by Harriet Hilliard, and with the feet and voices of Miss Rogers and Astaire working overtime, the picture should be a sure hit. It has a logical story based on the romantic ventures of two sailors, Astaire and Scott. The objects of their affections are Miss Rogers, a night club entertainer, and Harriet Hilliard, a school teacher.

Songs and Dances
"I'd Rather Lead a Band" is the novelty solo number by Astaire, accompanied by his band, on board ship. It is a routine dance in which he taps out orders with his nimble feet for a drill to a bunch of gobs. "All My Eggs in One Basket" is performed by Miss Rogers and Astaire, and so is "Let's Face the Music." Miss Hilliard sings "Get Thee Behind Me Satan" and "Here Am I, but Where Are You?"
Wednesday and Thursday the State will offer a double bill that includes a murder mystery and a drama. "The Preview Murder Mystery" stars Reginald Denny, Gail Patrick, Frances Drake and the silent screen star, Rod LaRogue. Others in the cast are George Barber, Ian Keith and another old-timer who has been playing successfully on Broadway the last few years, Conway Tearle.

The drama is entitled "Boulder Dam," with Ross Alexander, Patricia Ellis, Lyle Talbot and Eddie Acuff.

"Music Goes Round"
"The Music Goes Round" comes to the State Friday and Saturday with Harry Richman, Rochelle Hudson and Walter Connolly. "Life Begins When You're in Love," "Rolling Along" and "Suzannah" are three of the song hits in the picture, sung by Harry Richman.

Tonight, at the State, "The Prisoner of Shark Island" will be shown for the last times. This stars Warner Baxter and Gloria Stuart.

The Grand presents a double feature bill for Sunday and Monday. James Dunn and Sally Eilers with Pinky Tomlin in "Don't Get Personal" is the first film, and "Tough Guy," with Jackie Cooper and Joseph Calleja, the co-feature.

Tonight the Grand will show for the last times "Westward Ho," with John Wayne in the lead.

Why Pay Rent?

YOU can have a home of your own — by buying, building or refinancing through the new mortgage system created under the National Housing Act. Your mortgage may be up to 80 per cent of the appraised value of the property.

You can pay for the home in monthly payments, just like rent — for 10, 15 or 20 years — the term is up to you — until the home is actually yours.

That's a job by WARK'S; the kind of job that makes a good impression . . . and keeps up a standard of good appearance!
